Greetings from old Friends

Friend Bill:

Time slips along. We are we and you are you, and every Friday The News-Bulletin is a pleasure to both of us. When we came to Mokena in 1923 we found a pleasant community with everything necessary for home interest. During our two weeks of entertainment features, we found that there was a newspaper in the town. A worthy enterprise with a background of five years standing, The News-Bulletin.

This attracted our attention and was largely responsible for our choosing Mokena as our future residence.

This week, as editor, you are celebrating the 25th anniversary of the paper, published in the same building, partially remodeled to suit the convenience of your publications, advancement under the same efficient management. A successful, reliable, progressive institution of which we are all proud.

We sincerely wish you continued success in your future news activities.

Col. and Mrs. Don C. Hall

All the lights and power was put out of commission in the village and after several hours of work the Public Service Company repair men repaired the damage.

BAKERY SALE THIS SATURDAY

St. John's Evangelical church Women's Guild of Mokena will hold a bake sale August 28 at the church basement starting at 2:00 o'clock.

This Is The News-Bulletin's 25th Birthday

The success of any business depends on the good will and support accorded it by the public and we know that it is only thru the loyal support accorded us by our readers and advertisers that we have been able to round out a quarter of a century of community service and to our old friends, loyal and true, to valued new friends, and to those whose friendship we strive to serve, do we most heartily wish to thank them for their priceless though intangible asset, your good will, which we esteem beyond measure.

It has always been our aim to publish a good newspaper, to make it the highest quality possible, and to this end we aim, for the years yet to come, be they many or few, according to us, by the Supreme Publisher of all, to not only continue in our efforts of serving this fine territory of people, second to none, but to improve and progress in every way possible. And in looking back twenty-five years, the joys have dissolved into nothingness the hardships that have had a hand in molding us in principle.

MR. AND MRS. WM. SEMMLER

MARRIED IN CALUMET CITY

In a beautiful double-ring ceremony Saturday, July 31, Dorothy Florence Plantinga, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerrit Plantinga, 9938 Yale Ave., Calumet City, was united in marriage to Petty Officer Charles Robert Vander Veen, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Vander Veen of Frankfort, Ill. P. O. Vander Veen is at present stationed in the office of naval officer procurement in Chicago.

Vows were exchanged before Dr. Harry J. Hager in the Bethany Reformed church, Calumet City, amid a setting of palms and candle-light, while an American Flag in front of the auditorium lent a patriotic motif to the solemnity of the occasion.

The bride was dressed in a charming gown of white chiffon with French lace and wore a finger-tip veil with a tiara studded with pearls. She carried a gorgeous bouquet of white roses and was given in marriage by her father. The maid of honor, Marcella Plantinga, sister of the bride, was beautifully gowned in pink chiffon and carried a bouquet of pink tea roses. The bridesmaid, Florence Bolt, niece of the bridegroom, was attired in aqua chiffon and carried a lovely bouquet of yellow tea roses.

A military theme was attained when the bridegroom, and his two attendants, Thomas Carrick, Jr. and Michael Vander Meer, friends of the groom and also on duty with the Navy in Chicago, entered from the front of the church auditorium and stood at the altar waiting for the bride and her attendants. They were in the dress blue uniforms of the United States Navy.

Esther Plantinga and Jean Whyte, sister of the bride and niece of the groom respectively, served as usherettes. Both were dressed in pale blue and wore corsages of mixed flowers. While the soloist, Daniel Dooley, rendered the selection, "Oh Promise Me", both young ladies walked down separate aisles with lighted candles and lit the candles on both sides of the altar. Besides "Oh Promise Me", Mr. Dooley also sang, "I Love You Truly", and "Because".

Mrs. G. Plantinga, mother of the bride, Mrs. R. Plantinga, grandmother of the bride, and Mrs. J. W. Vander Veen, mother of the groom, wore sweetly-scented corsages of mixed flowers while the fathers of the bride and groom and the grandfather of the bride each wore a boutonniere of white carnations.

After the wedding an open house reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gerrit Plantinga for members and friends of the family. Mrs. Alfred Johnson, aunt of the bride, was an out-of-town guest from Groton, S. D.

The couple will be at home to friends at the home of the bride's parents, at 9938 Yale Avenue, Calumet City.

A Tribute

By Durward B. McLohon

For the past twenty-two years my duties as an advertising man has taken me to all parts of the United States. I have very many publisher and editor friends, who are considered of high standing and a fine credit to their profession.

However, in my twenty-two years in this field, my hat goes off to the one and only Wm. Semmler, better known as "Bill". This man amazes me. His stamina, his courage, his kind and true understanding of every body and everything, under any and all condition keep me agog.

Bill Semmler loves the communities which he serves and all the people within its confines. May I here present him with a new name, "Smiling Bill".

"Smiling Bill" is not out just for that almighty dollar. No sir-ree, but for the betterment and the good of all. This man receives only a fraction in money of his true value to the communities in which he serves. Some of Billy Semmler's happiest moments are when he has accomplished something for some one else for little or no compensation.

I've only known Mr. Semmler a short time, about three years, but to me I feel I've known him all my life. If I were to be chosen as a committee of one to select a man with the same kind of wit and pure, true, simple, understanding and principals as Abraham Lincoln, I would pick Billy Semmler.

Yes, Bill, congratulations for this twenty-five years occasion and I want to be the first to shake your hand on this quarter century mark.

ONLY MISSED ONE ISSUE IN TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

In all the 25 years of publishing The News-Bulletin, we have only missed one issue in spite of serious illness and even death in the family. The one time we missed was in the early days of the paper when a big express strike in Chicago prevented us from receiving our supply of ready prints from the Western Newspaper Union. The strike continued for a few weeks but after the first week the editor went to Chicago and managed to get his supply thru by smuggling the bundles under a seat in a passenger coach while the trainmen were not about and when Mokena was reached it was too late for the conductor to voice any objections. Soon as the strike ended paper shipments were resumed by express and no further trouble was encountered. Now we carry a big paper supply on hand and do not depend on small shipments.

SUBSCRIPTION TO BE RAISED TO $2.00

Because of the increase in paper, and everything else connected with publishing a newspaper, we are compelled to increase our subscription rate to $2.00 per year, starting September 1st. By mailing or bringing in person your subscription to this paper before next Wednesday, you may still have it for $1.50.

Get out your neckerchiefs and ten gallon hats, the Selby-McKinley Rodeo is coming to the Will County Fair, Peotone, August 31 and Sept. 1. The Show will be presented four times during its Tuesday and Wednesday stay. This rodeo is the same one that will show at Soldier's Field in Chicago on Sunday and Labor Day, September 5 and 6. The Will County Fair was only able to obtain this high class show due to the fact that they were coming thru Peotone en route to Chicago.

There is 100 head of stock with this Rodeo; full blooded Brahma cattle, bucking horses and saddle horses including a widely known bucking horse, Cheyenne, which will be in action. Fifty people are in the troupe, all of whom are being reported to be expert performers in this particular line.

Features of the Rodeo will be saddle and bare back bronc riding; Brahma steer riding; bull dogging and many other, western events. Miss Geneva Boen will work her high school horse, and she is also featured in trick and fancy riding. Luke McGlock and his educated bull "Old Frog" one of the outstanding features of the show, will furnish much entertainment. He was featured at the Chicago Stadium at the annual rodeo, one of the largest rodeos in the United States.

Floyd Pitzer of Casper, Wyoming will present his educated horse, Blue Desert, in an act considered by horse lovers all over the world as the most outstanding act ever presented to an audience.

Trick and fancy riding, wild cow milking, calf roping and driving a bull to a cart will form part of the program. There will be fun galore, at the four two hour performances to be shown.

On Thursday, September 2, the Fair, will present Lewis Brothers 3ring circus, with an array of acrobatic stars, dancing girls, aerialist's ponies, dogs, trained seals, and Sargeant Pork and his Galloping Jeep.

Tuesday, the first day of the fair will also be featured as War Bonf. Day. The treasury department has advised us that there will be several returned heroes who will make talks. Among some of the boys returned from the fighting will be Will County's own Sgt. Barry J. Joliet and Tech. Sgt. Ehrhardt of Beecher. Sgt. Berry a marine has seen service in the Gilbert Islands and Guadalcanal and Tech. Sgt. Ehrhardt has been on 25 bombing missions over Germany. These are your own boys, come and meet them.

You will note that there has been a complete change of program for the first two days. The management regrets that they were unable to complete the War Show program for the first day and the WLS show for the second day was cancelled for the reason that Scotty is in the hospital. We are fortunate to obtain the Selby-McKinley Rodeo who will put on just as good if not better show.

RETIRED ORLAND TELEPHONE MAN DIES IN HOSPITAL FOLLOWING RECENT FALL

Wm. Newcomb, aged 63 years, a resident of Orland township for a number of years, died in Silver Cross hospital, Joliet last Saturday. Mr. Newcomb sustained a broken arm in a fall from a ladder about a week ago. He had been suffering with a heart ailment and it is presumed the shock of the fall and injury contributed to the cause of his death.

Mr. Newcomb was a retired telephone man. At first he resided on a farm near Orland and for the past five years had resided in Orland Park.

Surviving are his wife Fannie; two sisters, and a host of friends.

Funeral services were held Tuesday morning in the St. Michael Catholic church in Orland Park. Interment was made in the St. Michael cemetery.

Oldest Church Organization In Will County

Old friends and new, who came from far and near to the celebration last Sunday of the 110th anniversary of the organizing of the Homer Township Congregational Church last Sunday August 22 enjoyed the day and renewing of friendships. Altogether it was an auspicious occasion, as historians have confirmed the fact that this is the oldest church in Will County.

The celebration started off with a pot luck dinner served at noon under the direction of a committee of the Women's Missionary Society.

At two o'clock the program was opened with a voluntary played by the pianist, Mrs. Robert Burch. Rev. Mr. Harold Finley led the devotional service. Letters from the following former pastors were read by Mrs. F. J. Paddock: Rev. John Hoyt, Luke Stuart, Edward Saylor, William Steele, H. R. Jay and C. F. Wolsted. The speaker of the afternoon was Rev. Mr. Elmer Ohlert, a former pastor, who spoke effectively of the value of a church in a community. He recalled vividly the occasion of the building of the addition to the church which comprised, a modern stage, kitchen and several Sunday School rooms.

At this time which was in 1928, the young people of the church organized a Dramatic Club which was very active until 1934.

Mrs. Leonard Bertelsen read a history of the church which was made more real and effective by the presentation of four pageants by a group of church members.

The first scene depicted the organization in the Blackstone home near Hadley on August 17, 1833; when five men and six women met and organized a Presbyterian church. Sixteen years later, the congregation became affiliated with the Rock River conference of the Congregational denomination.

The second scene, was the trial and ex-communication of a member because of intoxication; scene three, a women's society meeting and the fourth, was a modern Sunday School class. The pageant and history was sponsored by the Pilgrim Fellowship with Miss Monna Milton as chairman.

The service closed with the singing by the congregation of "God Be With You 'Till We Meet Again" and the Benediction.

This church now has a membership of 64 members and services are held each Sunday morning with Rev. Mr. H. M. Finley, a student at the Chicago Theological Seminary in charge.

Washington, D. C.

ISOLATIONIST CUPID

The nuptial rumor that the Chicago Tribune's Col. Robert R. McCormick was going to wed Mrs. Helen Essary, widow of the Baltimore Sun correspondent, was told to the President recently by one of his aides.

Both Colonel McCormick and Mrs. Essary are ardent isolationists and vigorous critics of the administration. In fact the colonel is considered the leading isolationist of the Midwest, if not the nation, while the Widow Essary, writing in the Washington Times-Herald, is probably the leading lady isolationist in the nation's capital.

So the President received word of this isolationist romance with considerable interest.

"I wonder," he mused, "what their progeny will be like."

Note—Later, Mrs. Essary heard about the President's remark and telephoned one of the White House aides to find out precisely what had been said. She did not comment as to whether the rumor of matrimony were true or untrue, but she showed great feminine curiosity regarding the President's comment.

DAY VS. NIGHT BOMBING

When Churchill and Roosevelt were in Casablanca, the British prime minister had a friendly argument with U. S. air generals regarding the feasibility of daylight bombing. Churchill was against it, arguing that the British system of night bombing was much safer, did more damage to the enemy.

However, latest figures just received by the war department show that Gen. Ira Eaker was right in sticking to day bombing. These figures show that U. S. bombers have knocked out Nazi fighter planes at a rate ten times greater than the British.

Here are the figures: In July U. S. airmen destroyed 500 Axis planes, lost 108 bombers of their own. In other words we knocked out five times as many planes as we lost.

In the same months, the British knocked out 129 enemy planes, but lost 258 of their own. In other words, the British lost two planes for every one they knocked out.

The British were operating at night when they could not see the enemy so well, but also when the enemy could not see them. American planes, operating in the daylight, could better concentrate on enemy fighter planes, but also were better targets for the enemy.

INFLATION REMEDY

The President has a non-inflationary solution to organized labor's demands for wage increases to meet higher living costs: namely, non-negotiable bonds, payable after the war.

Roosevelt revealed this secret during a confidential talk with R. J. Thomas, president of the United Auto Workers union, on price roll-backs, strikes and the War Labor board's Little Steel formula. Here is the summary of his views:

Prices. Roosevelt stated that he would make a vigorous attempt to roll back prices. He told Thomas that he would prefer that congress provide the money, but that, failing this, he would use either RFC or Commodity Credit corporation funds to restore the following food prices to their September, 1942, normal: Meat, canned goods, potatoes, milk and milk products.

It would be too difficult, the President said, to attempt a rollback of clothing and personal services. He pointed out that rents already have been rolled back to March, 1941.

Little Steel Formula. Roosevelt frankly stated that he was not enthusiastic about any arbitrary ceiling on wages—15 per cent above those prevailing in January, 1941. However, he considered the Little Steel formula the best brake on wage inflation so far proposed.

Instead, the President suggested that war workers would be much better off, and that the present wage stalemate between labor unions and the WLB could be broken, if workmen agreed to accept non-negotiable bonds, payable after the war, in lieu of wage increases.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Manhattan Banker Jimmy Warburg was not only the mysterious "John Durfee," spanked by the President for calling Victor Emmanuel the "moronic little king," but he also was the fictitious "Wallace Herick" . . . Warburg has so dominated OWI's foreign broadcasts that some people call it the "Office of Warburg Information."

INSIDE EUROPE

Swiss Minister Charles Bruggmann, brother-in-law of Henry Wallace, is probably the only man in the United States who has recently passed through Germany.

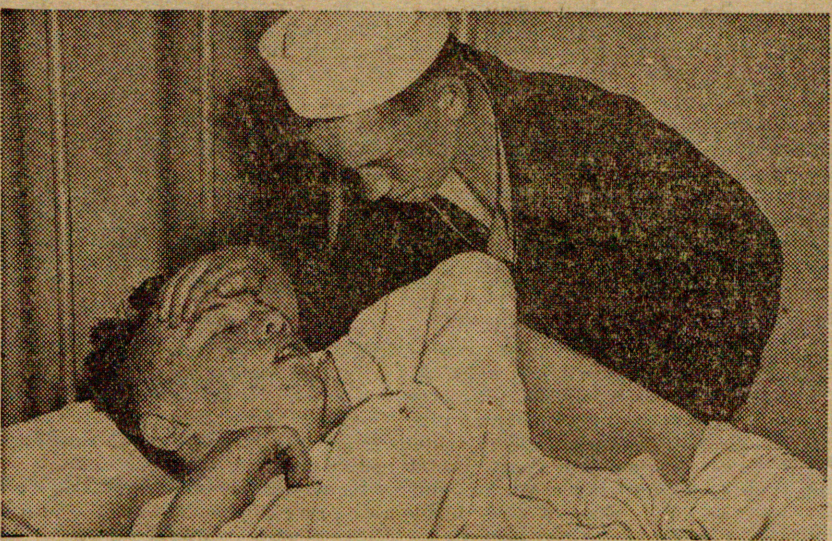

He not only visited Germany, but also France and Spain. In France he found the people downcast and downhearted. German soldiers on the streets of Paris went out of their way to be polite to the French people, even got off the sidewalks if necessary in deference to a Frenchman.

Churchill Arrives for 6th Conference

Britain's prime minister, Winston Churchill, is pictured at the Chateau Frontenac in Quebec, Canada, prior to conferences with President Roosevelt and Prime Minister King of Canada. It was to be the sixth series of conferences between the leaders and was expected to include terms for Italy's surrender and further military plans.

Brother Identifies Brother After 24 Hours

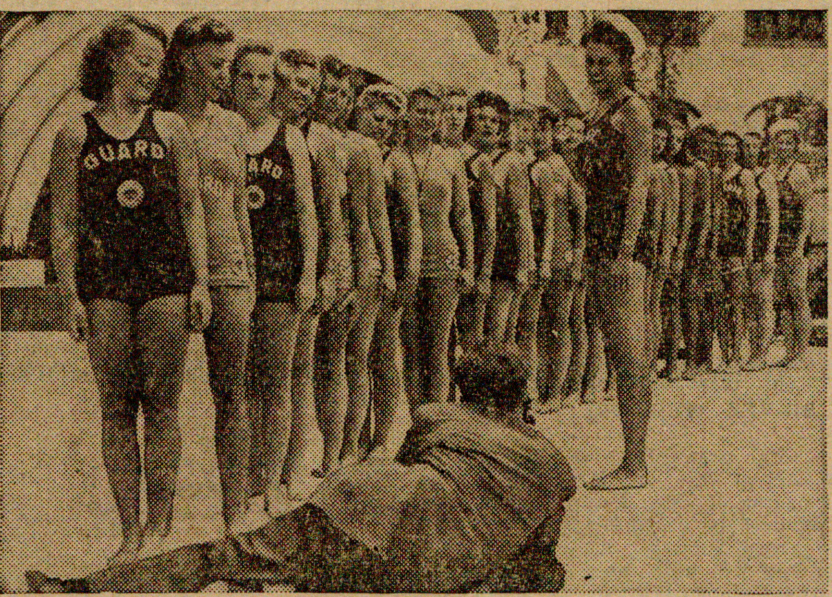

For 24 hours a boy who had fallen from a street car lay unconscious and unidentified in a San Francisco hospital. Then Charles Pryor, 12, asked to see the lad and promptly identified him as his brother Joseph, 14. Charles is pictured trying to comfort his brother who suffered a fractured skull.

Marching Too Slow for Sicily Invaders

Marching is too slow for these American soldiers in Sicily so they gain speed by utilizing this foot-propelled railroad vehicle. Approximately 125,000 Axis prisoners were captured in the invasion. A report that British ships had bombarded the Italian mainland was soon followed by an announcement that German troops were evacuating Sicily.

They're Useful as Well as Decorative

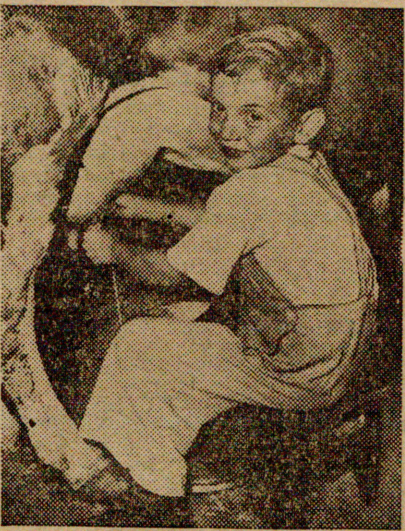

Girl lifeguards resemble a chorus line as they pose for news photographers on a Chicago beach where they had assembled for calisthenics, which keep them in trim for their lifesaving work.

Demolitionist

A group of manufacturers who recently visited Fort Benning, Ga., were introduced to a fully equipped parachuting demolitionist—Lieut. Samuel Calhoun. Fort Benning is a parachute and infantry school. Air borne troops were credited by military authorities for much of the success of the Sicilian campaign.

5-Year-Old Milker

New Guinea Warriors

Maj. Archibald Roosevelt, son of Theodore Roosevelt, and Capt. Carl E. Webber are pictured strolling in New Guinea. Their commander, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, stated that Japan is now on the defensive in this area.

ISRAEL'S SIN AND RESTORATION

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 32:7-10; 34:4-9, 27, 28.

GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is long-suffering and of great mercy, forgiving iniquity and transgression.—Numbers 14:18.

God is righteous, and cannot look with approval or in forgiveness upon sin until His mercy has been stirred and set free to act by repentance. Then He whose wrath is hotly kindled against man's transgression shows Himself as the tender and gracious God, "keeping loving-kindness for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin."

This grace of God is fully revealed in Christ and the redemption which He brought to man, but is prefigured in the experiences of Israel under the law.

I. God's Wrath Kindled (Exod. 32:7-10).

There are those who would have us think of God as a benevolent old gentleman who is easily hoodwinked by clever sinners who can talk fast to cover their iniquity. Even if He does see it, He is supposed to be so tenderhearted that He overlooks their sin.

Such folk had better read these words, "That my wrath may wax hot." The wrath of God is a real and awful affection of the divine nature and it is revealed against man who sins against His holy law.

The special sin of Israel on this occasion was idolatry, which is the setting up of some material symbol to represent the invisible God. Moses had been with God in the mount for 40 days. He had been the Lord's representative in their midst. His presence had evidently been the chief stabilizing influence.

Having their eyes set on a man, or a material object to take His place, they had lost sight of the invisible God. So they proceeded to establish this idol which would provide a center of worship. At first it was evidently intended to remind them of God, but soon it led them out into heathen revelry (Exod. 32:6, 17, 18).

Whatever a man puts between himself and God, even though he may at first intend it to be but a reminder of God, will lead him away from God. Ritual, symbols, theology, scholarship, all good in their places, may become the idols which separate present-day man from God.

II. God's Mercy Invited (Exod. 34:4-9).

Aaron had only a weak "alibi" to offer. The golden calf had practically made itself (see Exod. 32:24). How quick man is to justify himself instead of admitting his guilt. No doubt our excuses sound just as silly as Aaron's in the ears of God.

Moses knew better. The sin was dealt with in drastic fashion. When one deals with a wild ravenous beast, there is one remedy—"shoot to kill." Not only were the leaders of the wickedness slain, but the ground gold of the calf image was put into water, which all Israel drank. Thus were they all marked as sharing the guilt of this idolatry.

There is a lesson here for us. America is far from God. We need to seek His face in repentance. But let us remember that we (that is, Christian men and women) are a part of America. It is our guilt, and we ought to be on our faces before God, pleading for God's mercy upon our land.

Moses was now ready to seek the Lord's mercy for his wayward people. He is the intercessor, the intermediary. God had a man who had compassion and love in his heart, and the Lord heard him. Loving-kindness and tender mercy flowed forth in place of flaming anger.

Note that God has not changed. He is the unchangeable One. His wrath is still hot against man's sin, but man has repented, and moved out of God's wrath into His love and grace. That too is always being shown to His obedient children.

III. God's Covenant Renewed (Exod. 34:27, 28).

Moses had broken the first tablets of commandments. The people had sinned and were not then ready to listen to any word from Jehovah. But now they were prepared to receive it, and God renewed the covenant as He again gave Moses the law.

There is no need for despair in the heart of the one who deals with God. The missed opportunity for obedience and blessing may be gone forever, but God is still on the giving hand ready to meet the returning prodigal, ready to give beauty for ashes (Isa. 61:3) and to restore the years that the locust has destroyed (Joel 2:25). Amazing grace!

In the keeping of these commandments, Israel was assured of the blessing of God. As we pointed out last week, the real fulfillment of the law came in Jesus Christ, who did not set aside its requirements, but met them all, for all who believe in His name.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT

It did have a bearing on rubber use—the close to 24 billion gallons of gasoline used by highway vehicles in 1941. California led the states with a mark on the edge of 2 billion gallons. These are numbers for the "A" card holder to conjure with.

Tires for our fighting aircraft consume from 35 to 96 pounds of rubber, depending on the size of the plane. Inner tubes take from 24 to 54½ pounds.

At a rubber plantation in Haiti, a 75-foot tree was pulled to the ground by the weight of cryptostegia vines which had fought one another to climb it.

MY FRIEND FLICKA

by MARY OHARA

THE STORY SO FAR: Ten-year-old Ken McLaughlin, given an opportunity to choose any yearling on his family's Wyoming ranch, picks the filly of a "loco" mare. His father, a retired army officer, is disappointed by Ken's choice and by his failure at school. When the filly, Flicka, is badly hurt trying to jump the corral fence, Ken takes the opportunity to make friends with the wild little colt. Captain McLaughlin, who still thinks Flicka is "loco," spends ten dollars for medicine for her and explains to a surprised Ken that his failure at school cost just thirty times that much. He thinks for the first time of what that means to his father.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XV

Ken went to the table, sat down and propped his head in his hand, staring down at the red-checked cloth. It could hardly be believed that such momentous things could follow the small misdemeanor of looking out a window and neglecting to write a composition.

"If I wrote it now, Mother," he said at last.

"Well, I told you to do that, a month ago," said Nell. "Have you done it?"

"No."

"Have you even thought of it again?"

"No—not since when Dad said he wouldn't make me do the study."

"You might do it of your own accord," said Nell, writing on her list. "He does things for you of his own accord."

"I know—that's it. Mother, do you think if I wrote it, Mr. Gibson would take me back in my own grade?"

Nell put down her pencil and paper, and sat back on her knees. "Kenne, you write the composition, 'The Story of Gypsy'; and I'll write him a letter, explaining. And we'll send them to him. And perhaps when school opens, he may decide to let you try again."

The fine weather still held. And because it was due to break any time, McLaughlin decided to hire a crew of six extra men, and get the haying done in three weeks, instead of taking on only a couple of extra hands and letting the work run through September.

Ken and Howard thought it was fun to eat in the kitchen with the hay crew. The men stamped in at meal time, with clean washed faces and hands, and freshly slicked hair.

The proximity of the two towns, Cheyenne to the east, and Laramie to the west, made the men restless. They could hear the transcontinental busses out on the Lincoln Highway; and the moment they had a few dollars in their pockets, they were in a fever to spend them.

Other things happened. One day the biggest hay wagon, fully loaded, was turned too sharply by the driver, and tipped over.

Another day, when McLaughlin had gone to town, the men tried to get the baler across the creek in Castle Rock Meadow, bridging it by means of a few heavy boards laid across. They foundered the heavy machine in the mud of one of the banks and failed to get it out during a whole morning of sweating and shouting and cursing.

McLaughlin had neither the time nor patience to help Ken with Flicka. Or, thought Ken, was it because she had cost him that ten dollars for the serum that he was so short and irritable?

When Ken bothered him to know what he should do next with the filly, McLaughlin roared, "Oh, do anything with her you want! Lead her around. Get her used to the corals and the stables."

So Ken led the filly by the halter and lead rope. Into the pens and corrals, up through the Gorge into the horse corrals where she had been caught. When he first tried to get her through the door of the stable, she halted, and Ken did not force her. He stood at the door with her, and finally left her there and went in alone and poured some oats into the manger for her. That did the trick. She walked in of her own accord, and when she had eaten her oats, became curious and investigated every corner of the barn. Together they made the rounds, Ken at her head, discussing what they saw.

Everyone on the ranch got used to the sight of the boy leading the little golden mare around. She used three legs, and held up the fourth. The wound on the foreleg was hard and swollen, but did not seem to pain her.

Both the boys had to spend part of each day in the haying field. There were many ways in which they could be of assistance. When the hay was being tossed from the little piles into the hay wagon, to be carried to the big stack and dumped there, the boys could stand in the wagon, tramping the hay down, and distributing it with pitchforks, so that it would load more evenly. There was endless running of errands and fetching and carrying to be done on Highboy and Cigarette.

Howard spent the whole day with the hay crew; but Ken, when he was let off, hurried back to Flicka in her nursery.

He was beginning to have a feeling of pressure. Here it was almost September—school began the fifteenth—only a couple of weeks more to spend with Flicka. Standing at the filly's head, so he could talk to her and look into her eyes, he thought about it and it was appalling. Why, the whole summer was gone! Back in school soon, without Flicka, living apart from her for many months, not seeing her, not even knowing what she was doing, how she was looking, what she was learning—bad tricks or good—

Ken knew that he had to take it like a man. It was part of the price he paid for Flicka. There was also the composition. He was writing it. He brought his copybook down to Flicka's nursery and sat on the side of the little hill between the trunks of the cottonwood trees and worked at it, and read bits of it aloud to her. It needed to be only a few pages long. Making it up was not hard, there was plenty to say, but it was hard to get the spelling right, and the punctuation. When it was finished, he would copy it at the desk in his room so that the penmanship would be perfect.

"This," he said proudly to Flicka, "is a three-hundred-dollar composition, Flicka. Dad gave you to me, Flicka, and I'm giving him three hundred dollars. So, you could say, I'm paying for you—that's a pretty good price for a little yearling filly—but I'll have to take ten dollars off that, for the shot of serum."

Sitting nibbling the end of his pencil, his thoughts concerned with "The Story of Gypsy," his eyes were on Flicka, and it seemed to him that her ribs were showing. It was the first time he had noticed that. She ate her oats, she grazed, but she certainly was thinner than when she had been brought in off the range, thinner even than she had been a week or two ago.

"That's why—who's running this ranch?"

He spoke about it to his father. Rob glared at him. "Do you give her oats twice a day?"

"Sure."

"Does she clean 'em up?"

"Yes."

"All right, then."

"But Dad—would you come and look at her?"

"No! Don't bother me about her!"

Ken went back to Flicka and his copybook and pencil. But when he looked at her, his eyes were troubled. The wounds seemed neither better nor worse; hard and dry and somewhat swollen; but certainly, she had lost flesh.

Everyone is thin, thought Ken, after an illness. And Flicka had been ill a long time. She would pick up gradually, the way grown people did, when her sickness was quite over. Besides the wounds, there was that thing his father had said—an infection of the blood-stream. That means she was sick all the way through. She had a lot to get over.

Nell was counting the days until the hay crop should be in, the haying crew gone, and she would have time to breathe again. She lived in the hot kitchen, or in the car, driving back and forth to town for supplies.

When supper was over and the dishes washed, she had a few hours for herself. She would have a tubful of water waiting for her upstairs; would run up, slip off her kitchen smock and step into the water, then dress in fresh clothes—her cool gray linen slacks and blouse, and wander off alone into the woods for refreshment and solitude.

One night she decided to go up to the Stable Pasture, her favorite haunt. At the last moment, thinking of the meals for the next day, it occurred to her that a fricassee of cottontails would be nice for a change. So she took one of the twenty-tuos out of the gun-rack in the dining room, filled the pocket of her slacks with shells, and headed for the Stable Pasture.

An hour later she came hurrying back through the Gorge. Her face was very white and the pupils of her eyes distended. She cast a glance over her shoulder, then stopped and half turned and peered into the darkness that was gathering between the cliffs and under the aspen. Though there was nothing of a frightening nature to be seen she whirled and broke into a run, calling, "Rob!"

There was a tremor of hysterical excitement in her voice, as with head turning constantly to look over her shoulder, her feet flew down the path.

"Rob!" she called again, "The wildcat!" Then, reaching the edge of the Green, she pulled up short. Rob was standing some distance off, bawling out Tim. He had not heard her, and Nell tried to assume a calmer demeanor. It would not do to appear before Tim in near-hysterics.

She went quietly toward them, anxious to reach Rob, to get hold of his hand, or at least to stand close beside him until he should be through talking to Tim. She was ashamed of her fright but could not control the pounding of her heart or the trembling of her hands. When she had told Rob all about it, she would feel better, she thought.

But she stopped before reaching them, because Rob was shouting, "When I tell you to pasture the cows in Seventeen I don't mean Sixteen."

Tim's face was crimson. "The Missus told me to put them in Sixteen, Captain."

Nell stood there with the little gun in her hand, looking from one to the other, the wind gone out of her sails.

"Did you tell Tim to put the cows into Sixteen?" shouted Rob.

It was a relief to her taut nerves to whip back at him, "I did. Any reason why I shouldn't?"

"I'll say there's a reason," he bawled. "I told him to put them in Seventeen. That's why—who's running this ranch?"

Angrily Nell answered, "One of the cows is coming in heat and I don't want her bred by that Hereford bull over the fence from number Seventeen on Crosby's land. That happened last year. We had a mixed Hereford and Guernsey calf—it's not going to happen again."

"Whose business is it to give orders to the men?" roared Rob.

"The cows are my job; always have been."

"You tell me what you want and I'll give the orders!"

Several of the haying crew were seated on the bench outside the bunk house. They could see and hear all that was going on.

Nell's eyes filled with angry tears. "I'll give any orders about the cows I want!"

She turned and ran into the house, sobbing with fury; because of the fright she had had; because Rob was in a nasty mood and she couldn't tell him about the wildcat; because he had humiliated her before the men; and because she had made the mistake of shouting back at him.

"Never any use," she muttered as she rushed upstairs, "just makes him snarl louder."

She pulled off her slack suit and began to dress for town.

A moment later she heard Rob's voice in the living room, shouting, "Nell!"

She did not answer, but slipped on a green silk print, then zipped it up, stopping to wipe the tears from her face again.

"Nell!"

She perched on the edge of the stool before her dressing table and hastily smoothed and arranged her hair, determined not to answer.

"Nell!"

"What!" Rob could always whip an answer out of her, even against her will.

He came stamping upstairs and stood at the door looking at her. Just because he should have been surprised to see her dressing for town at that hour of the night, he said nothing. She volunteered the explanation.

"I'm going to town," she said defiantly. "I can't stand it here another minute. I'm going to a movie."

There was silence, while she finished arranging her hair. Then Rob said, "It's quite cold. You'll need a coat. What one will you wear?"

"The light green plaid."

He went to the closet, hunted in it till he found the coat, took it down from the hanger and was holding it for her when she was ready to put it on.

"Got your hanky? And some money?"

"Yes—Oh, wait, I don't think I've got any money."

Rob got his wallet out of the coat he had last worn to town and put some bills into her purse.

He followed her downstairs and out to the car, took the whisk broom out of the car-pocket and cleaned the seat before he'd let her get in.

Nell took her seat, her lips set, her eyes determinedly turned away from him. If he asks me now if I love him I'll slap his face. She wished he would.

He hesitated at the open door after she had taken her seat and started the engine. Then he stepped back, closed the door and stuck his head through the open window.

"Don't forget to fill up with gas in town."

Nell made no reply, waiting, with exaggerated patience, till he should withdraw his head and let her go.

"And don't drive too fast." He stood back.

Radio Story Teller and Columnist. Value of a painting often depends on whose nail it hangs from. None of these celebrities have played vaudeville, so there is little danger that their little masterpieces are plagiarisms on the "Berle-Youngman-Jessel" school. Here are some favorite jokes of famous people:

AL SMITH:
A citizen attended his first political jamboree. He wasn't there long before somebody copped his watch. He reported it to the district leader, who whispered: "Next to which guy was you standin' last?" Victim pointed to a fellow in the center. "Just don't say nothin' and it'll be O.K." In a few minutes the leader handed the watch over to its owner. "What did he say?" asked the grateful man. "Sh-h-h—quiet—he don't know I got it!"

MAYOR LA GUARDIA:

(Tells this one on himself)
Two Soviet representatives arrived at City Hall. Instead of the expected and accepted costumes of Stalinists, they wore high hats, etc. They looked at LaGuardia, in baggy overalls, and all he could say was: "Gentlemen, I represent the Proletariat!"

FANNIE HURST:

A dapper fellow walked into a bakery and ordered a special cake: "I want it 55 inches in diameter—nine layers—seven colored frostings. In the center, I want my initials, R. N. I want it as soon as possible." "I'll have it for you in a week," was the answer. On the appointed day, he called, inspected the cake: "It isn't exactly the way I want it—change the yellow frosting to orchid." On the second inspection, the fellow was delighted: "Perfect—perfect." "Where shall I send it, sir?" "No place—I'll eat it here!"

BERNARD SHAW:

When Lionel Barrymore was scheduled to appear in "Macbeth," there was much doubt among New York ticket brokers whether to "buy in" before the opening. McBride was the leading broker. All the "specs" were on hand for the premier. Lionel floundered through the part. Then came the big moment—his shout "Lay On MacDuff!" Came the answer, from the rear of the house: "Lay on, McBride!"

JIM FARLEY:

Joe Louis, in the Polo Grounds, finished an opponent in a few seconds of the first round. After the victim got in his dressing-room, he didn't say a word—he was still out. He dressed and his manager escorted him to the street. It was raining. The pug put out his hand and moaned: "Gee, this will hurt the gate receipts!" "Oh," cracked the manager, "I forgot to tell you—the fight was called off!"

JIMMY WALKER:

A hillbilly called on a girl for a year. Finally, her father flagged him: "Time I asked you something—are your intentions to my daughter honorable or dishonorable?" "You mean I have a choice?" queried the hillbilly.

ILKA CHASE:

A young radical refused to work. His old man let him have it: "Fine bum—why don't you go to work and make some money?" "Aha, I'm glad you brought that up. It'll come the revolution and we'll have a Utopia—we won't need the money!" "But why don't you go to work and make $50,000—when it comes the revolution, then you can help them with it." "Aha—suppose it don't come the revolution—then I'm stuck with $50,000."

MARC CONNOLLY:

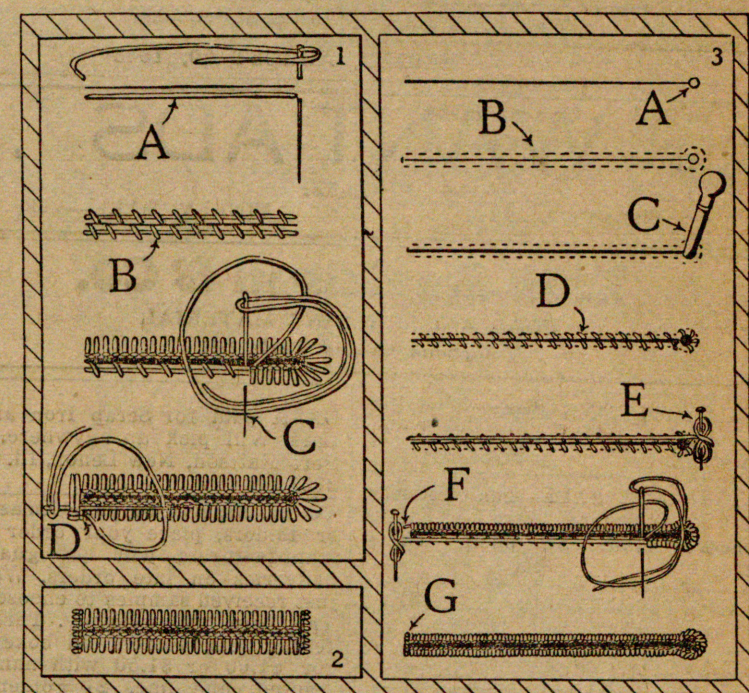

When Caesar tried to take Ireland, he was repulsed by Clancy and Finnegan. Caesar returned with more legions—again was pushed back. Julius was now really mad. He gathered the full might of his armies and navies and started for Ireland again. This time, Clancy and Finnegan were careless. Sitting on a raft, they were surrounded, captured after a terrible struggle and brought to the Forum, as captives. Caesar threw the pair into the arena against 500 gladiators. Clancy and Finnegan mowed them down. Caesar burned. He ordered them to fight 2,000 lions. This day the crowd really turned out. As Caesar and his retinue entered the arena, Clancy pointed: "See that beautiful blonde with Caesar? Well, this morning, she looked at me and"—just then there was a mighty roar—"Sorry, Finnegan, here come the lions—I'll have to tell you the rest later!"

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT:

Ailing gentleman ambled into a doctor's office: "I'm having trouble with my eyesight and hearing." "Are you a drinking man?" "Yes, doctor." "That's it—stop drinking at once, report to me in a month." A month later he reported: "Doc, I still have trouble with my eyesight and hearing." "Did you stop drinking as I told you?" "Nope—what I've been drinking is so much better than what I've been seeing and hearing lately I decided to keep it up!"

BETTER DRESSMAKING

By Ruth Wyeth Spears

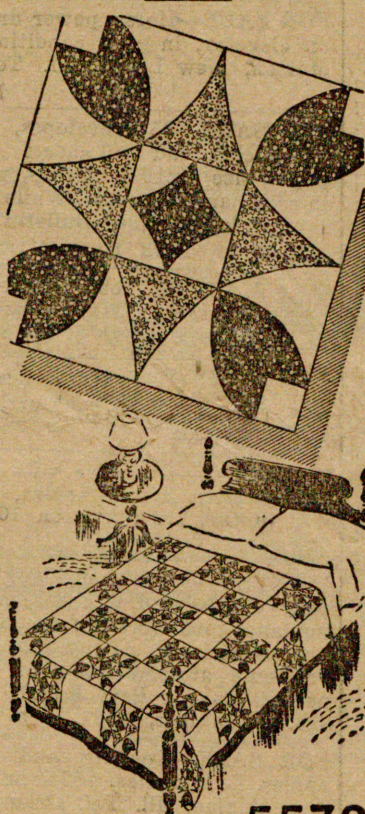

CONSERVATION of clothing begins with an ounce of prevention. When we think of where garments wear out first, buttonholes come to mind. Once the material around them becomes frayed the garment is finished so far as good looks is concerned.

The buttonholes of old garment may be reworked; those of inexpensive ready-mades may be reinforced; and those in new garments may be made both smart and substantial with evenly purled stitches.

Three types of worked buttonholes are shown here. 1. The buttonhole with fan stitches at the outside end and reinforcing bar at inside. 2. Buttonhole with bar at both ends. 3. Tailored buttonhole with eyelet at outside end. The process of reinforcing a buttonhole slit with long stitches and overcasting is shown at A and B, in Sketch 1. The position of the needle and thread in making the purled buttonhole stitch is shown at C. The blanket stitch used for the bar is shown at D. Sketch 3 shows the method of marking the tailored buttonhole at A; stitching around marking, at B; punching eyelet, at C; overcasting, D; method of holding reinforcing thread, E and F. The bar at the inside end is shown at G.

NOTE: If you are interested in having more and better clothes for yourself and family, learn to sew. Today's lesson is one of hundreds in the new 256-page book BETTER DRESSMAKING, by Ruth Wyeth Spears. Every phase of dressmaking—cutting, fitting, tailoring, remodeling is explained with clear, easy-to-follow drawings and text. You will want to own this beautifully bound lifetime reference book. Sorry I haven't written sooner, but really have been busy. I have been shipped here to take my overseas training. It's pretty rough but I've been able to take it so far. I have completed my overseas training which is 48 days. So guess I've been thru the worst. It shouldn't be too tough from here on out. The weather has been pretty hot here.

But I guess its that way all over.
We went on a four mile hike up into the mountains last week, was really OK. Thanks for all the things you have sent me. All of it was gladly received by yours truly. So until I can see everyone in Tinley in person I'll say so long.

Yours,

Dear Folks:
I am writing to thank you for the packages you have sent me. They really come in handy. Its always nice to receive something from your home have not forgotten us away.

I am well and thanking you again.

Dear Friends:
I must apologize to write as soon to ship came in, so I decided to wait as I was classified, but our orders till I arrived at my new base.
Maxwell Field is a very hot place but is a very pretty place. Our bar-acks are very nice, being of stucco covered brick with cement floor, double deck beds. Its very nice. Our cadet honor is stressed very much here. A violation of the honor code is a very serious offense. I am classified as a pilot, and here at pre-flight for two months. The upper class system has been eliminated so it is comparatively easy for us. I received my kit which came in very handy and many things are very handy. I want you all to know, I am very thankful to all the people in Tinley Park and am proud to come from a town which contains so many thoughtful people.

want to thank you for it. I have changed stations and now am at Del Monte Pre-flight School. I will receive alectial navigation, code, aer-ology, gunnery and a lot of physical training.

I have finished 56 hours of flight in light ships, and have had 216 hours of dead reckoning navigation.
This is really a beautiful hotel and very pretty grounds. There is about one officer to every 25 cadets.
That is about all I can think of now, so I'll close thanking you again

NEW LENOX, ILLINOIS

News-Bulletin Editor Almost Took Up Railroading

Wm. Semmler, editor of the paper almost came embarking in a railroad career instead of the newspaper business in 1901. At that time his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Semmler resided in a flat over the Ward Knickerbocker store which stood a little west of where the Herb Bruns tavern now stands on Lincoln Highway in New Lenox.

The editor's father operated a cobbler's shop in a small building which stood directly on the same spot where the Bruns tavern is now located. This building at one time had been a school house and stood on the southeast side of New Lenox and when it was sold Wesley Kennedy purchased it and had it moved to New Lenox and conducted a meat market in it for many years and after his death the shoe shop mentioned was started.

The family living near the Rock Island railroad, the son became fascinated with the many trains which passed by and often stopped each day and particularly were the engines of very deep interest.

One day the young would-be railroad man then 14 years old declared he was going to build his own engine and set out to do just that. There was a nice pile of logs stacked up in back of the shoe shop and he arranged the logs for the base of the engine. Next the locomotive boiler was made from a sheet metal container used for holding and displaying coffee, a flour and a sugar barrel. These three being of different sizes were then arranged together to form a typical likeness of an engine boiler tapering to form the large shape of the boiler near the cab down to the smaller size in front from which the smoke stack extends.

Next the Knickerbocker store yielded an assortment of objects found useful in building this "engine." Covers from large cheese boxes were used for the drive wheels of the pony truck usually found under the front end of all locomotives with the exception of switch engines.

Next a piece of wood was fashioned into a driving rod and fastened to the driving wheels and then to a piston rod which in turn fit into another large tin can which was used for the cylinder while the steam chest was made of a square wooden box. Strips of black cloth were pasted onto the cheese box covers resembling the spokes of the wheels. Tin foil was placed on the rims of the covers to resemble the steel tires of the driving wheels.

Next the steam dome atop of the boiler was made from a heavy paint ball set upside down with a funnel on top of it and into the opening of the funnel a long piece of white paper was placed to imitate escaping steam. Next another can was used for the sand box and wires were run from the sand dome down next to the drivers in imitation of the sand pipes seen on real engines. A good sized bell and clapper was unearthed somewhere the exact place being forgotten.

This bell was placed in a frame fastened securely on top of the "boiler" and its ringing could be heard all over the neighborhood. The smoke stack was fashioned from a piece of stove pipe and a piece of heavy paper painted black was fastened into the stack to represent smoke pouring from the stack. The head light was fashioned from a salmon can. The cab was built next, the frame work was made from pieces of wood and covered over with water-proofed tobacco signs which had been discarded by the Knickerbocker store. The cab was large enough for a boy to get into and one of the logs had been so arranged as to form a seat. A tape measure casing was found and served for the casing of the steam gauge. An old catalogue on steam threshing machines had fallen into the hands of the young budding railroad engine builder and with the aid of compass and a piece of white cardboard the markings and numbers found on a real steam gauge were copied and an indicator hand was cut from a thin piece of wood from a wooden butter dish often used in stores which have since given way to paper ones. The hand was secured with a brad in the center of the gauge and could be moved about to any number on the gauge indicating the amount of the steam pressure. The gauge was fastened to the boiler part with a round stick. A glass tube was partly filled with water and served as a water gauge.

Parts of a sewing machine were used for the throttle. A big earthen jar was placed in the end of the boiler to represent the fire box. A string was run from the cab to the bell on top of the boiler. The cab had real glass windows which could be opened and closed at will. The roof and sides were waterproof and the boys used to like to sit in the cab when it rained.

A pilot was built in exact replica of the real thing and fastened to the front of the engine.

A canvass was made of the stores of New Lenox for tin foil and a real good supply was obtained. The tin foil was ironed out with a cold flat iron until it was perfectly smooth and then pasted over the boiler part, thus giving the effect of a silver engine.

Many of the old New Lenox residents of today still remember the history of the engine which was 12 feet long, 4 feet wide and 8 feet high.

Next a semaphore was made with a red and green signal board and they could be operated into different positions by merely pulling a string attached to them.

This master piece of railroad engine building attracted the attention of the railroad men, and trainmen often used to throw off various articles from cans of lubricating oil to valves. When trains stopped long enough the engine crew would come over and inspect the job and said it was a dead ringer of the real thing. Even the road master and other railroad officials stopped by to see this "engine" which bore the lettering in large yellow cardboard letters "C. R. I. & P." and the engine number was 932 which was the actual number of a passenger train engine in service on the suburban run. The engineer of this train, a Mr. Jennings was transferred one day to a local freight train and had a chance to come over and inspect the replica and was quite encouraging with his words of praise.

People attending the New Lenox Camp Meeting coming in by train would stop and view this engine the fame of which spread all up and down the Illinois division of the Rock Island. Pictures were often taken of this "locomotive".

A disastrous fire which broke out the night before Thanksgiving in 1901 and which destroyed the Knickerbocker building and the shoe shop also consumed the "engine" which could not be moved as it was built on logs and too close to the burning building. Thus ended the railroad career of the 14 year old embryo railroad man.

The Semmler family came near perishing in this mid night fire and had barely time to flee for their lives and lost all of their house goods.

The following year the Semmler family moved to Mokena. In 1910 the writer entered the newspaper business as the local correspondent of the Joliet Weekly News and has been engaged in the newspaper work ever since.

One of our every two families have at least two workers. Figure it out yourself how much beyond 10 percent of your family income you can put into War Bonds every payday.

Bill Sows Some Seeds
In his old Home Town

In his old home town twenty-five years ago, this 21st day of August, a young man started out with a life's ambition to become a newspaper man and with a determination and youth's ambition, today owns a newspaper that does him real credit in his same old home town.

Credit on his side of the ledger with something more definite and real than just mere money.

Bill, our friend, had some ups and downs and downs and ups.

Yes, there were critics with comments by business men and others that Bill and his paper would take a big flop in a small town like Mokena.

A year later things began to happen. Bill, with his determination and courage to succeed and his racing up and down and down and up our country town streets of Blue Island, Tinley Park, Frankfort, Orland, Marley, Homer, Lincoln Estates, Spencer, Manhattan, Green Garden, Lockport and we almost forgot, Mokena, with more towns and cities. Bill soon became a familiar welcome fellow.

Smiling, hustling, hand shaking, Bill sowing his seeds of ambition and hopes with good fellowship.

The friendship that some hard crusted business men claim ceases in business. Bill knocked that old balahoo cockeyed by just creating oodles of friends, the real kind that holler "Hello Bill!" from our good, busy, country town streets.

A mighty fine deserving token of friendship to any business or any man.

Hustling, smiling, agreeable Bill with your handshaking which was always real you were never hog-tied in traveling your successful road to a more successful future, hustling up and down and down and up on our streets, never too busy to stop with a smile for a chat and go hustling along to meet the rest of us.

Bill's doing the same old thing in the same old way this very day. With his friends, the farmers, the laborers, the business man, and all the rest of us who helped to make the News-Bulletin of Mokena a friendly paper much welcomed and read by all of us in our towns.

Bill deserves the credit for the success of his sowing of the same seeds.

May we wish you thousands of continuous healthy, happy, interesting days so you can continue to send us your nice paper. Hats off to you, Bill!

And here's to your very capable one-half being, your wife, Margaret and your two lovely daughters, Adeline and Ada. Yes, we grew up with you, Bill.

CAPPEL, JOHN—In memory of our husband and father who passed away one year ago August 29.

Your gentle face and patient smile With sadness we recall

You had a kindly word for each And died beloved by all

The voice is mute and still is the heart

That loved us well and true

Oh bitter was the trial to part

From one so great as you

We miss you now, our hearts are sore

As time goes by we miss you more

Your loving smile, your gentle face

I Wonder

I been trying to get it through my noggin how we gotta stamp out the foreign types of Govt. that trample people. And the type they been having under Adolph is National Socialism, where the Govt. runs every thing and says you can have one glass of beer or 2 glasses—and with out or with a baloney sandwich. We gotta lick Adolph's outfit—where just the Top Boys do the saying.

It is okay to put the skids under That is why everybody is 100 per cent in buying bonds, and joining in such an outfit. Everybody says so, the fray.

But it is hard to savvy about throwing National Socialism off our front door-step while we are letting the same kind of varment sneak in at our back door. If German socialism is bad medicine and we gotta spend 10,000 million to quarantine it, I am up a stump about the USA pouring more billions into things like TVA, and 100 other foreign-type ventures.

I gotta research more into what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander or vice versa. I am perplexed.

Yours with the low down,
Jo Serra

ORLAND PARK

Gordon C. Doctor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray W. Doctor of Orland Park is now enrolled as an aviation cadet in the Army Air Forces Pre-flight School for Pilots at Maxwell Field, located on the outskirts of Montgomery, Alabama.

Here the new class of cadets is receiving nine weeks of intensive military, physical and academic training preparatory to beginning their actual flight instruction at one of the many primary flying schools in the army air forces southwest training center.

Bartel Andresen received word this week that his grandson, Sgt. Alfred Oelschlagel, aged 21, has received injuries in an airplane accident recently. Sgt. Oelschlagel is the son of George and Emma Oelschlagel of Chicago. He has been in the army over a year during which time he received training in camps in Texas and California. Early this year he was sent to Africa where he saw active duty. He was an airplane mechanic and this accident has caused him to be paralyzed from his hips down. It is expected that surgery can be performed which will relieve him of this trouble.

Sgt. George Merrill Cooper has been home on a 15 day furlough from his station in Orlando, Fla. His brother Floyd and wife of Indianapolis spent the weekend at home.

Their mother, Mrs. Adelle Cooper entertained 25 relatives and friends at a dinner on the lawn of her home in their honor Sunday.

Sgt. Cooper returned to his camp Sunday evening.

Miss Eleanor Cooper and grandmother, Mrs. Brandau, spent last week at Cedar Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Schmideck spent the past week at Tippecanoe, Indiana on a vacation.

Mrs. Barney Homerding and her daughter have returned from Silver Cross hospital where both underwent minor operations.

Mrs. George Yunker is on the sick list.

The village board met Monday evening and the matter of improving the village streets was the chief topic under discussion.

Complaint were made that while the streets were being treated with an asphalt treatment, certain residents of the village drove around the barricades onto the freshly treated streets, thus picking up the coating and damaging the surface of the streets.

Postmaster A. J. Taelle who has been ill in his home for quite some time, was little improved this week.

Mrs. Dickmann of Evansville, Ind. is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lozaw this week.

"HF" FOR HARD FLYING

"HF" is a chemical term meaning hydrogen fluoride; and hydrogen fluoride is a substance that is largely responsible for the present prodigious production of 100 octane aviation gasoline—the special fuel that is required for the successful combat operation of allied aircraft of all types. By the use of this one chemical material, as a catalyst, it has become possible to combine isobutane with butylene, propylene or pentylene, to yield 100-octane gasoline. These chemical unions were previously regarded as impossible of accomplishment. The whole operation is now being performed as a practical, efficient commercial process in a number of plants, and it is available to any refining company. Illinois is intimately involved in this important development, since it is from Illinois mines that fluor spar is secured, to provide the critical and strategic chemical substance, hydrogen fluoride, that makes the whole cycle possible—from mine to chemical industry, to refinery, to the fighting fronts—and to victory in the air.

Most oil wells except gushers, require special treatment of the oil bearing strata in order to cause the petroleum contained in them to flow into the well holes at a satisfactory rate. The treatment usually consists of the "acidizing" of limestone strata, and the "shooting" of sandstone beds.

Limestone is acidized by introducing a special hydrochloric acid solution into the well and allowing it to decompose the stone at the producing level. Thus, the rock is rendered more porous and channeled so that it gives up its oil with greater ease. Sandstones are "shot" with nitro-roglycerine, which breaks them up and produces fractures that usually extend outward for a number of feet from the bottom of the well, with the same result as in the case of acid treatment of limestone.

Sandstone being composed of quartz grains, does not react to acid treatment except when heavily cemented with lime. Some special acids for sandstone treatment have been used at various times, but so far the rule holds almost universally: that limestone "pays" are acidized and sandstone "pays" are shot.

In the production of both coal and petroleum, Illinois ranks with leading states of the nation, and is the only state that now produces both of these fuel minerals in really important amounts. How much of either one still remains to be brought to the surface in future years we cannot say. We can make logical estimates of the size and extent of the reserves, but they cannot be accurately inventoried except by drilling into the earth and proving their occurrence where they are actually encountered. Every hole that is drilled for the purpose of coal or oil exploration in the State furnishes additional information on the subject; and careful, scientific study of each hole provides data that can be translated into estimates that are certainly conservative.

We can, therefore, say without fear of contradiction that petroleum reserves in Illinois pools already discovered amount to at least 350 million barrels, and that our known coal reserves, in beds sufficiently thick for commercial mining operations, amount to more than 150 billion tons. Future explorations and geological studies may definitely increase these safe estimates.

The News-Bulletin Aided In Promoting Important Projects

The News-Bulletin has fostered a number of projects which have been successfully concluded and which have meant much to the Mokena community.

When the Illinois hard road program was at its height, the News-Bulletin fought for a concrete road and deemed the Wolf Road to be the logical highway for the community. When the one hundred million dollar state bond issue for the construction of hard roads was voted on, Mokena was left out of the picture. What is now Keane avenue had been placed in the state road map, but this highway missed Mokena by almost two miles. The News-Bulletin started an intensive drive for a hard road for Mokena. A local road committee was formed and meetings were held every Monday night for almost 6 months in the old school house which formerly stood in the east end of the village.

These meetings bore much fruit inasmuch as residents north of Mokena in Cook County became interested and agreed Wolf Road would be the logical highway to concrete. As this road was not included in the state bond issue, funds had to be looked for in another quarter. Cook County road boosters finally got the Cook County Board of Commissioners interested in the project and the latter agreed to include this highway on the Cook County program and Wolf Road was paved from 143rd street in Orland township south to the Cook and Will County line.

The hard road boosters in Mokena finally had an opportunity when Will County floated a special bond issue for the construction of highways in the county not included in the state road program. When the Will Co. bond issue passed and the county was ready to build hard roads a spirited fight broke out in Mokena regarding the location of the proposed hard road thru Mokena. One faction claimed that the road should branch off from the Lincoln Highway east of New Lenox, follow an old dirt road which passes underneath the Rock Island bridge over Hickory Creek and then runs by the Bruder farm and then connects with the New Lenox road also known as Francis road. The advocates of this route contended the road would then be run thru the front street of Mokena eastward to connect with Kean ave.

The News-Bulletin felt this route was illogical and that Wolf Road should be paved from the Cook-Will County line south thru Mokena and connect up with the Lincoln Highway. As a result of this controversy a fight ensued and continued for almost 8 years, but in the end the route suggested by the News-Bulletin was accepted and paved. At first the highway was only paved up to Hickory Creek bridge south of Mokena and ended there until a controversy with C. M. Cleveland for a right of way thru his farm was settled and then the paving was continued to the Lincoln highway. Wolf Road has meant much to Mokena as it connects this community with the Southwest Highway in Cook County and the Lincoln Highway in Will County.

Sponsored Memorial Day Exercises
Before the News-Bulletin was established, Memorial day was not observed in Mokena, although quite a number of Civil War soldiers and a veteran of Washington's army are buried in the several cemeteries around Mokena.

The News-Bulletin sponsored the first Memorial Day service held here and the editor procured flowers and flags and secured the location of the soldier graves and decorated them. The public responded nicely to this move and for the past 15 years a Memorial Day program has been carried out each year and in later years the Boy Scouts have aided in decorating the soldiers graves. The editor has compiled a roll call which today lists 17 names of defenders of our flag and country, two World War I veterans being on the list.

Within recent years the Mokena Civic Association has been sponsoring the Memorial Day exercises with the editor in charge as chairman of the arrangements.

For many years the old pioneer cemetery at the edge of Mokena on Wolf road was a desolate and deserted spot. When the Mokena Garden club finally took up the matter of converting this wildly overgrown spot into a memorial spot, The News Bulletin backed up the idea 100 per cent and on Armistice Day in 1939 the editor had the honor of naming and dedicating this hallowed spot, which is now known as "The Pioneer Memorial Cemetery."

A checkup revealed that many of the old pioneers were buried in this cemetery over 100 years ago and a few headstones still stand recording the births of some of the old timers back to the 1790's. Abraham Evans and Henry Brill Civil War veterans and Chas. Denny of the American Revolutionary War are buried in this old cemetery.

News-Bulletin Brought About Homecoming

A number of years ago a movement was begun to organize a Lions Club in Mokena, but the plan died out, but as a result of this movement the Mokena Civic Association was born. This group was anxious to do something for the good of the community.

The News-Bulletin advanced the idea of holding an annual Harvest Festival and Homecoming and the idea caught like magic and the first Homecoming was held in October 1938. The weather turned very cold and nearly froze out the affair. Following years the Homecoming was held earlier in the season and got away from cold weather. The Civic Association did much good with the funds derived. Flags were donated to the Boy and Girl Scouts, a skating rink was started donations were made to the Red Cross and many worthy causes were supported. Last year the proceeds all went to patriotic causes. Due to war conditions the Association voted this year to dispense with the annual homecomings until peace again reigns.

During the present war The News Bulletin has donated liberally of its space in promoting the various drives thru this and adjoining communities. The News-Bulletin is providing a much appreciated link between the boys in service and the homes they have left by way of sending the paper free each week to nearly 500 boys from this and adjoining communities.

During its 25 years of existence The News-Bulletin has always stood for progress and the advancement of the best interests of the community and has also fought against and defeated propositions which it deemed not for the best interests of the people.

GEORGE FUNK OF TINLEY PARK DIES SUDDENLY Is Stricken With Heart Attack HUNDREDS ATTEND FUNERAL

Tinley Park, Aug. 21.—George Funk, well known Tinley Park resident, died very suddenly Tuesday evening. He had been working all day. He ate a hearty supper and just before retiring he went to the well for a drink of water. Members of his family heard him fall, and when they reached his side found him unconscious. Dr. I. Eckstadt was summoned, but upon his arrival found Mr. Funk beyond medical aid. He died within a few minutes after the arrival of the physician. Heart trouble is said to have been the cause of death.

The funeral was held Friday afternoon, services being held in the Saenger hall. Several hundred people attended the services. Burial in Vogt cemetery. Mr. Funk is survived by his widow, two daughters, Mrs. Herman Etchin of Tinley Park and Mrs. Clara Stevenson of Knox, Ind. He was sixty-four years old. Mr. Funk was a lifelong resident of Tinley Park. Six brothers and two sisters also survive.

ALFRED HATCH, MOKENA RETURNS FROM ARMY OF OCCUPATION

Alfred Hatch, who has been with the army of occupation in Germany, returned home Friday evening. He is looking well and feels fine. His many friends are very glad to see him home again. Arthur Zumstein is the only Mokena boy in a foreign country. He is located in Siberia.

The village board will meet in monthly session next Wednesday evening. At this session the annual tax levy bill will be passed. An ordinance licensing various business will also be considered. It is proposed to raise revenue by this means of taxation to offset the loss of the saloon license revenue.

The officers of the New Lenox Home Improvement club have been interesting the Mokena ladies in the organization, and it is planned to start a similar organization here.

Mrs. Edward Seibel, who recently sold her property to John Mattes is packing her household goods preparatory to storing them, as she and her daughter, Miss Charlotte, expect to spend the winter with relatives in Iowa.

The members of the Mokena Men's club, held a special meeting last Tuesday night at Mokena hall, to vote on question "Shall the Mokena Men's Club purchase the Mokena Hall?" and the proposition was voted down.

The Mokena Men's club will direct a moonlight picnic at their pavillion Saturday night. Plans are being made for the observance of Labor day.

News has been received that Mrs. S. J. Eakle, formerly of Mokena, now of Poplar Grove, is suffering with an attack of rheumatism and has to walk with a cane.

The Boys Scouts and Campfire Girls held a carnival on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lynk Friday p. m. It was well attended. The money realized is to go to help support a French orphan that the girls have adopted, whose name is Marcia Boyer, nine years old. The boys will use their portion of the money for their scout work.

OLD RESIDENT OF FRANKFORT PASSES AWAY Thieves Attempt to Rob Balchowsky Store

Frankfort, Aug. 21.—Mrs. Marie Eichenberg, aged 78 years, a well-known old resident of Frankfort, died Saturday morning at 10 o'clock following an illness of several weeks. Funeral services were held Monday at 2 p. m. from the late home to St. Peter's German Evangelical church, Rev. G. Lambrecht officiating. Interment at Pleasant Hill cemetery.

Awakened by the sound of breaking glass about three o'clock Thursday morning, Mrs. B. Zechlin awoke her husband. The latter saw two men walking on the Balchowsky store premises, and thinking the men might be some of the members of the store firm called to them. This startled the men, who fled. Mr. Zechlin telephoned to the Balchowsky residence and summoned a company of villagers by phone. The store premises were surrounded, but when the store was entered it was found that the robbers had failed to get into the building, and no trace was found of them. It is supposed the robbers had an auto near by as they escaped so quickly. A transom in a rear door had been broken when the robbers were frightened away. This is the second time within several weeks that the Balchowsky store was visited by robbers.

How The News-Bulletin Was Established 25 Years Ago

When the editor was 23 years old he became interested in newspaper work and it was thru the kind interests and efforts of his friend, Mrs. Charles Hansen now of Frankfort, but who at that time resided in Mokena, that he had an opportunity to enter newspaper work as correspondent for the Joliet Weekly News and the Joliet Republican and Joliet Herald. After a few months he corresponded only for the News and the Herald and finally the News made him a proposition to act as their field man for Frankfort, New Lenox, Mokena and Tinley Park which he accepted. In the fall of 1914 he entered on his duties as city reporter in Joliet. In the spring of 1915 the News was merged with the Herald and he was associated with the Herald until the close of the last war when he found the territory was anxious to have a local weekly newspaper.

He had started a job shop along in 1916, but did not have the facilities for printing a paper. The next move was to buy a press and other needed equipment and then to find room for it. Finally an addition was added to the print shop and a cylinder press which had been purchased from the old Blue Island Standard was moved to Mokena and the News Bulletin was printed in its own shop.

Previous to this it had been printed in Blue Island for several months until the press could be moved to Mokena. Type for the news matter was set in a Chicago shop and shipped to Blue Island while the advertising matter was set by hand in the shop in Mokena, tied up and taken to Blue Island where the paper was made up and printed and then brought back to Mokena to be mailed out.

The News-Bulletin was brought about by the insistence of the business men as well as the residents of Tinley Park that the editor establish a paper. The business men of Tinley Park offered to organize a local stock company to start the paper, but when the World War came on, the matter was dropped until the close of the war when the editor took the matter up again and decided to run the paper without a company.

The first edition was liberally supported by Tinley Park advertisers and who are still strong in advertising.

The News-Bulletin put on a number of circulation contests which were highly successful and which built up the circulation wonderfully.

About fifteen years ago the Lions Club flourished in Tinley Park and the Lions thought it would be a good idea if Tinley Park had its own paper, so the editor named the edition of the News-Bulletin which had been going to Tinley Park to the title of "The Tinley Park Times" and carried features in this edition not found in other papers and also specialized on Tinley Park news with the result that Tinley Park has a distinctive paper of its own. And over 2 years ago the editor did open an office in Tinley Park as was suggested 25 years ago. All the Tinley Park news matter is now being set in the Tinley Park office by the editor's daughter Miss Adeline Semmler, on the linotype.

Orland Park was not to be left out in the cold and shortly after the Tinley Park Times was launched a number of the progressive citizens and leaders had a meeting with the editor and asked that Orland be given a paper of its own, and thus it came about that the Orland Park Herald came into being and is now 13 years old. The News Bulletin was the forerunner of these latter two named papers. Orland Park, too, has been loyal in their support of their home town newspaper.

The initial issue of the News Bulletin was about 750 copies whereas today the combined circulation of the three papers totals over the 3000 mark.

The News Bulletin office at Mokena has been greatly enlarged since the first paper appeared. The shop now has two jobbers, two cylinder presses, a linotype, paper cutter, plate making machine, sticer and a large variety of type. The shop is equipped to handle any job from a business card to a news paper. Of late this shop has run its first job of three color process work.

The founding of The News-Bulletin was not a one sided affair, by that we mean that only one person had a hand in it. The editor owes his success to the largest degree to the loyal and hard working co-operation of his wife who inspired him on when things were difficult and who uncomplainingly worked side by side with her editor husband and took a just pride in seeing the business grow thru out the years until now 25 years after launching out in the publishing field we both can view with satisfaction the results of our co-operation and team work, which we still carry on today.

The editor also has had a fling at local politics. He served as town clerk of Frankfort township for eight years; held the office of village clerk of Mokena for 12 years, and served as village trustee for six years.

I WOULD like to caution my victory gardening friends on the harvesting of their tomatoes, potatoes and onions and to be especially careful in the storing of the latter two in such a way that losses can be avoided.

Tomatoes for canning should be picked when fully ripe, that is, at a time when they contain maximum amounts of flavor, vitamins and minerals. If the tomatoes are to be used for salads when appearances count more than taste or food value, they may be picked when three-fourths ripe and placed in a shaded place.

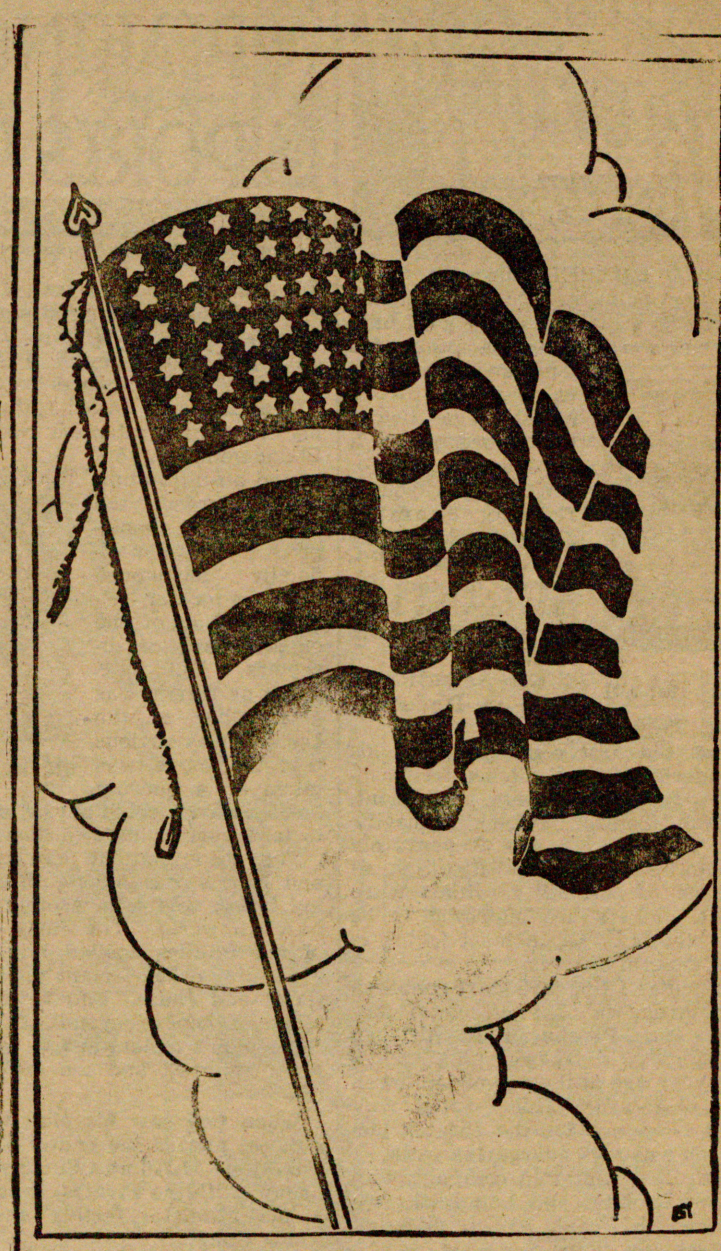

Tomatoes left on the vines until fully ripe may crack or the skin may discolor. This does not affect their food value, but may make them less attractive in salads. Tomatoes should always be picked when the vines are dry to avoid spreading foliage diseases.

For your potatoes, they should be dug when the vines are dead, and if the vines have been killed by blight, no time should be lost before digging. The potatoes should be permitted to dry after digging unless this exposes them to hot sunlight. Rough handling will bruise them and make them susceptible to rot attacks in storage.

Red and yellow onions should be pulled when the tops die and bend over, but white onions should be harvested before the tops become thoroughly dry. Onions which have produced a seed stalk should be used soon after being pulled as they will not keep in storage.

Onions should be cut far enough above the bulb so no green tissue is removed. If the onions are bruised in topping or by handling, they will not last long in storage. Both onions and potatoes should be stored in a cool, dry place.

Until next time, lots of gardening luck, everybody.

DAIRY FOODS HAVE GONE TO WAR

To provide for the nutritional needs of the nation's fighting forces and for lend lease, civilians must get along with less dairy products than in 1943 amounting to the equivalent of 39 quarts of milk. Last year the average person consumed 397 quarts of milk as milk or milk products. This was more than in any previous year. For 1943 there are only 358 quarts of milk available per person.

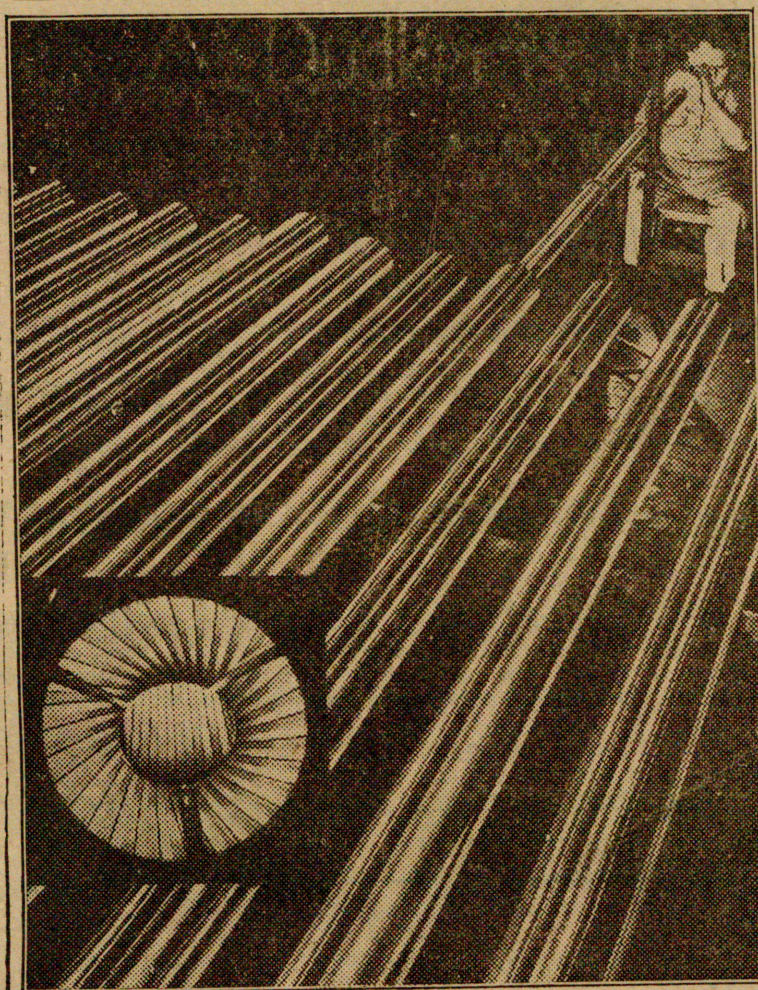

There have also been important shifts in the way in which milk is consumed. Last year the average person consumed the equivalent of 177 quarts of milk as milk and cream. This year there will be 190 quarts per person available in that form.

But in every other case the amount of dairy products available has declined. Last year 150 quarts of milk went into the making of the 16 pounds of butter the average American ate. This year we can only have 12.8 pounds of butter coming from 121 quarts of milk. Last year the average person consumed the cheese from 30 quarts of milk, the ice cream from 21 quarts of milk and condensed and dry milk from 19 quarts. This year there are only 22 quarts available for cheese for the average person; 13 quarts for ice cream and 13 quarts for milk in other forms.

Even though production is higher than last year all of the balance of the product is being used for the armed forces and for lend lease. Because of the exceptional nutritional and protective qualities of dairy products soldiers are given approximately twice as much of them as are available for the average civilian, points out the National Dairy Council.

War Plant "Spy" at Work

There's a "spy" at work in one of America's great war plants with full approval of the plant police—and instead of looking out for trouble, he looks in for it. He's a trained inspector at a Chevrolet gun plant, employed to check interiors of the gun tubes this General Motors Division is producing in quantity for the 90-mm. anti-aircraft gun. He is shown here using the boroscope, a special optical instrument developed for checking the finish of the gun bore, rifling and surface. A tubular electric light on the end of the boroscope affords inside illumination so that every square inch of the bore may be closely scrutinized as the boroscope is moved forward and backward the length of the 15 1/4-ft. barrel. An ominous sight for the Axis is the inset close-up of the rifling as seen through the boroscope. Production of this gun, which has a range of more than five miles, is a major Chevrolet war assignment.

CARL HUBBELL brought out a neat point the other day. It was Carl's idea that too many good ball-players were left in the minors too long, and often were facing baseball's middle age before they were given a big league chance.

Carl Hubbell
born in Decatur, Ala., 35 years ago.

For the first eight years of his wanderings Sewell pitched for Nashville, Raleigh, Toronto, Beaumont, Detroit, Seattle, Toledo, Louisville and Buffalo. Rip was 30 years old before he reported to Pittsburgh, at an age of baseball servitude when most pitchers are supposed to be over the hill. Or at least facing in that general direction.

In spite of this late start Alabama Rip turned in 57 victories in four years for Pittsburgh up through 1942.

A year ago at the age of 34, Sewell won 17 games for the Pirates. Winning 17 games for the Pirates last season was no kindergarten work.

Late last winter in company with Frank Graham and Lou Little, we listened to Frank Frisch give out his sobbing notes.

The Fordham Flash that winter afternoon was in a low and melancholy state.

He was especially shy on pitchers. He admitted that Rip Sewell was smart and game, but at the age of 35, after so many pitching years, he wasn't to be compared to such men as Mort Cooper, Pollet, Vander Meer, Passeau, Riddle and many others.

But the snows of winter have given away to the blazing heat of late August.

And who is in front of the parade? A fellow by the name of Rip Sewell, the first pitcher in either league to win his 14th game, the first pitcher in either league to make it eight in a row.

As Mort Cooper of the Cardinals told me—"Rip is one of the smartest pitchers I ever saw. He can drive a nail with his control."

The Mystery

What we can't understand is why pitchers such as Carl Hubbell and Rip Sewell were allowed to drift around year after year before they were finally given a big league chance.

Carl Hubbell was a first class pitcher and a promising prospect in 1923 and it was 1928 before the Giants finally decided he might have something packed away in that left arm.

The same is true of Rip Sewell. There are any number of ballplayers today in minor leagues who are much better than any number of big leaguers.

One answer is that after the war there should be a new distribution of big league cities. To this list you can add such places as Los Angeles, Baltimore, San Francisco and Buffalo, all major sporting centers.

The major league situation was set up many years ago before centers of population and sporting interest took a big switch.

If the present setup is continued, there is almost certain to be a third major league.

There can be a large number of changes in the general sporting situation after this war is over.

In this mid-summer season it is easy enough to start an argument. Especially camp arguments. The latest one that has broken out, or rather has been renewed, is whether the right hander or the left hander has a better average in sport.

There are more right handers than left handers, so the former get the jump when it comes to quantity. The quality side can stand a brief debate.

Different games have different answers. For example, no left hander that I can recall has ever won a National Open or a National Amateur golf championship.

There are and have been good left handed golfers. But no Bobby Jones, Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen, Byron Nelson or Ben Hogan.

No one has been able to explain this peculiar side of golf. It just happens that way. You would think that once in a while, at least, a left handed golfer would slip in and nip off a big title.

It hasn't happened yet. Baseball is entirely different. Here the proud southpaw can hold his own in either hitting or pitching.

Championship tennis has known a few fine left handers. Heading the list is Norman Brookes of Australia. Then there was Murray.

In the course of the last 20 years or so we have probably heard a thousand different reasons why left handers can't win major championships. Few of them make any sense.

PEAKING OF SPORTS

by Bob McShane

IN HIS rough dismissal of Bucky Harris as manager of the Philadelphia Phillies, William D. Cox, club president, showed a remarkable lack of common decency.

That fact was called rather forcibly to Cox's attention when the Philadelphia players issued an ultimatum which forced the president to apologize. It had been officially announced that the ouster followed action of the club's board of directors. But inasmuch as Harris was a member of the board it was obvious that the move was taken on a quorum basis. Harris could not be expected to take part in his own dismissal.

The disagreement between Cox and Harris was a long time growing. Cox was a newcomer to the baseball world. The early success of the Phillies spoiled him. They gave him a false slant on his material and caused him to raise his financial hopes beyond all reason. He couldn't understand it when the team slumped and the crowds fell off.

When Cox saw his club take six straight toward the end of May and then draw 37,176 at a Sunday double header with the Pirates, it gave him a too-optimistic feeling about the whole thing.

Unhappy Day!

Then the Phillies lost six in a row and 10 out of 13. Newcomer Cox was distinctly unhappy.

All during the time the Phils were playing over their heads, Harris, ever a realist, didn't permit himself to believe his club was going far beyond fifth place. He attempted to tell Cox that he didn't have enough good ball players. Cox couldn't believe that.

One of baseball's most able observers, Shirley Povich of the Washington Post, said in a recent column that Cox was far too devoted to rah-rah tactics. In part, Povich said:

"Harris discovered that Cox was calling in players for inspirational pep talks and invaded the dressing room at will. Cox once wanted to deliver a lecture on the bench, but Harris talked him out of it. Cox wasn't doing the team or Harris any good by sitting in a box seat and hurling insults at the umpires, either. The man meant well, but it was no way to run a ball team."

"Before the season started, Cox got some grandiose ideas about his Phillies. He thought about calling them the 'Commandos,' a name that would have made the perennial last-place club even more ridiculous. He told Harris that he wanted Commando training for the players in the spring along with their hitting and fielding practice. Harris didn't like it."

Critics Answered

Harris has a reputation for being one of the most patient managers baseball has ever known. When the Phillies chose to come to the support of Harris in his war with Cox it answered the critics who failed or refused to understand why baseball's wise men regard Bucky as a good manager. They knew he wasn't getting a fair shake.

Fred Fitzsimmons, the former Brooklyn pitcher named to manage the Phils, is a well liked player, but his ability as a manager is unknown. Harris proved his capabilities during 19 years of managing big-league teams.

Fitzsimmons has two heart-breaking jobs ahead of him. He must try to suit Cox, who has proved his inexperience, and he must make something out of the Philadelphia club. Either job requires the patience of a Job and the wisdom of a Solomon.

For a while the Phillies were giving more than they were able to and time found them out. They got by on hustle and near-desperation. That wore off and they were no longer able to tear themselves to pieces. Cox couldn't realize that. He was wearing rose-colored glasses and believed there were no rough spots or detours on the road to success. Harris realized—all too well—that the club had definite limitations. He knew the day of miracles had passed.

Cox, a Johnny-come-lately, allowed himself to be stampeded into ill-advised action. Only time—and a reasonable amount of common sense—can remedy the situation. Time, in his case, is not the important factor.

SPORTS SHORTS

Bill McKechnie of Cincinnati has used only six starting pitchers this season.

No player succeeded in hitting home runs in all eight National league parks last year.

Frank Strafaci, one of the nation's leading amateur golfers, now on duty in Australia, recently bought a racehorse for $65.

Gunder Hagg, famed Swedish runner, will return to the United States after the war and take out citizenship papers.

Farm Topics

Soybeans Benefit By Crop Rotation

Beans Use Chemicals Remaining in Soil

Since soybeans have assumed such an important place in the family of war crops, the condition of the soil on which they are produced is a matter of importance to the farmer.

George H. Enfield, of the agronomy department of Purdue university pointed out that while soybeans need a plentiful ration of plant foods in order to produce maximum yields for Uncle Sam's war requirements, their diet can be adequately filled by "eating at the second table" if the soil's fertility level is high.

"Eating at the second table," Mr. Enfield explained, "means that soybeans respond to the hold-over fertility placed in the soil by previous crops in the rotation. Long-time fertility tests have demonstrated repeatedly that yields have been increased, on the average, from 3.2 to 10.6 bushels per acre because of this sound practice."

In view of the essential value of soybean products to agriculture and war industries, Mr. Enfield said, the fertility level of the soil that produces the crop is of prime importance. "Every farmer has noticed that beans will produce larger yields on fertile than on infertile soils," he added.

In three-year soybean growing tests on fertile land at the Purdue soils and crops farm, he said, increase from applying fertilizer with an attachment to a corn planter for row-seeded beans was about 70 per cent greater than when the same treatment was applied with the wheat drill and the beans seeded solid.

"The tests revealed that the unfertilized crop averaged 27.8 bushels of soybeans per acre," Mr. Enfield explained. "Applying 100 pounds of 0-20-20 with the fertilizer attachment to the corn planter at seeding time increased the yield 3.3 bushels per acre."

Advantages of "plow-down" methods of fertilization were likewise described by Mr. Enfield. "In dry seasons," he said, "if the fertilizer is placed near the surface it is in dry soil and out of the reach of feeding roots. However, if the fertilizer is placed deeper, the roots can get it out of the moist soil. In wet seasons, fertilizer placed near the surface encourages weed growth. Results from one experiment showed that the weed competition was so severe where 666 pounds of 0-12-12 analysis was applied to the surface of the soil and disced in, that the yield was decreased 1.6 bushels per acre. The same treatment plowed under greatly increased the yield."

Mr. Enfield declared that soybeans apparently are very sensitive to potash deficiency. The results of demonstrations showed that potash-starved soybeans did not mature naturally. The leaves would start to die before the beans were completely filled and the test weight was lowered. In all cases of potash-starvation the percentage of damaged beans was unusually high.

Pressure-cooker canning is safer than is the hot water bath method because it is the only method whereby the heat-resistant spores that cause canned foods to spoil can be killed. These spores are found in meat, fish, and poultry, and in all vegetables except tomatoes, pimientos, peppers and rhubarb.

And Your Strength and Energy Is Below Par

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood. You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder. There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won countrywide approval than on something less favorably known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

The ordinary machine gun is too cumbersome for our Marines, especially for parachute troops. So the Marines have adopted new models of the Reising sub-machine gun, a .45-caliber weapon.

The new gun used by the paratroops is a compact model with a pistol grip and a steel-frame stock which folds out of the way when not in use. You can help buy these for our Boys in the Solomons and elsewhere with your purchase of War Bonds. Join the Payroll Savings Plan and let's "Top that ten percent." U. S. Treasury Department

Women AT WAR

Sophia

Mrs. Kimball and Mrs. Worthington, dressed soberly and wearing their best black gloves, walked along the stony country road back toward Sophia Hardy's farm, to pay their visit of condolence.

"How do you reckon she'll be bearing up?" Mrs. Kimball asked Mrs. Worthington. Both ladies wore their most solemn, funereal expressions.

"A mighty severe blow," Mrs. Worthington said. "Mighty severe. To lose your only son, the mainstay of your declining years. And such a dreadful death, too—to go down with a ship. Mercy!"

"The first of our boys from Hand County to go, too," Mrs. Kimball said, mournfully.

"I wouldn't blame Sophia Hardy for feeling right bitter."

They stood on the simple stone doorstep, with downcast eyes, getting themselves into the proper commiserative mood.

"Come in!"

The voice was brisk and cordial. They looked up in surprise. Sophia herself had come to the door. As they followed her into the parlor they exchanged glances, with eyebrows lifted. Sophia was not even in mourning. The parlor shades were not even drawn.

"It's nice of you to come," Sophia said. "Do sit down."

"We came," Mrs. Kimball said almost reprovingly, "to tell you that our hearts are bleeding for you in your great loss."

"We know how lonely you must be out here," Mrs. Worthington said. "With nothing to take your mind off . . . off . . ." She sniffed and reached in her purse for a handkerchief.

"Oh, I keep busy," Sophia said. "I've just finished applying for the Government insurance on Tom's life."

The visiting ladies could not resist a shocked glance at one another.

"I want to get it right away," Sophia said. "So I can put it into War Bonds. My boy hasn't finished fighting yet, not by a long shot."

The ladies were so occupied with feeling horrified, so titillated by this callous behaviour in a bereaved mother—that neither of them noticed Sophia's hands. Under the folds of her clean print dress, against the seat of her chair, they were tightly clenched.
